If you were an Associate Justice serving on the Supreme Court, what legal arguments would you take into account in deciding Texas v. Johnson? Freedom of the Press and School Newspapers In Hazelwood School District v. Kuhlmeier the Court ruled that the First Amendment rights of student journalists are not violated when school officials prevent the publication of certain articles in the school newspaper. Freedom of Assembly – Cox v. New Hampshire The First Amendment protects freedom of assembly. Includes materials to lead discussion or debate surrounding the Landmark Case of Cox v. New Hampshire. Carey v. Musladin The case of Carey v. Musladin asks students to separate emotions from reason when they decide the following question: If the friends and family of a murder victim sit in the trial of the alleged murderer wearing buttons printed with a picture of the deceased, does that prejudice the jury and risk depriving the defendant of his Sixth Amendment right to an impartial jury? Failure is Impossible – Woman Suffrage To dramatize the debate for woman suffrage, playwright Rosemary Knower was commissioned to write a narrative script, drawing on the Congressional Record, petitions to Congress, personal letters within the legislative records of the Government, and other archival sources such as newspaper editorials and articles, diaries and memoirs. Memorial Day- Secondary Students will define the different categories of memorials and begin to understand the intentions of the artists who design them. Students will also consider current international conflicts and use their findings to design a memorial. President’s Day – Elementary Students will learn about Abraham Lincoln and his role in shaping America by researching his life. Tribal Sovereignty Students will be asked to research the sovereignty issues facing a tribe that resides within their state border. Then, they will develop their own sovereign nation. The American Presidency – grades 4-6 This group of lessons was created as part of the permanent American Presidency – A Glorious Burden exhibit at the National Museum of American History. The American Presidency – grades 7-9 This group of lessons was created as part of the permanent American Presidency – A Glorious Burden exhibit at the National Museum of American History. The American Presidency – grades 10-12 This group of lessons was created as part of the permanent American Presidency – A Glorious Burden exhibit at the National Museum of American History. The Constitution and the Economy Students see how the U.S. Constitution supports those characteristics by reading relevant portions of the Constitution, and matching these provisions with the six characteristics of a market economy. Titanic Mock Trial Materials for a mock trial based on the sinking of the Titanic. The site includes information regarding the case of the Estate of Hans Jensen v. White Star Line. Extending Suffrage to Women In this interactive activity, students will see eleven different documents arguing both for and against voting rights for women. Their task is to put them in the order that they were created, making a list of the arguments that suffragists and anti-suffragists used to convince others of their opinions. DocsTeach: We the People The two documents students will see are George Washington’s copy of a draft of the U.S. Constitution and the final, ratified version of the Constitution of the United States. They are to evaluate the difference in wording between the two by answering and discussing the provided questions. The Constitution at Work An interactive online learning activity in which students connect primary sources with sections of the Constitution and determine the big idea(s) found in the Constitution exemplified by each. The Trial of Susan B. Anthony: The Woman Suffrage Movement, A Document-Based Question Students are asked to use primary source documents, knowledge of the period from 1865–1873, and knowledge of Susan B. Anthony to answer: To what extent did the trial of Susan B. Anthony advance the cause of suffrage for women? The Trial of Susan B. Anthony: Interpreting the Fourteenth Amendment, A Simulation Activity In order to examine the meaning of the Fourteenth Amendment and the suffragists’ arguments in favor of voting rights, students write scripts for and reenact a hearing before the House of Representatives Committee on the Judiciary as well as reenact a jury deliberation in the Susan B. Anthony trial. Newspapers in the Digital Age Students evaluate the most significant developments in news dissemination through individual ranking and small group consensus work. Students then construct an illustrated timeline that explains the historical significance of each development. Finally, students predict trends in journalism over the next 5 years. Journalists and the Constitution Students write an amicus brief in the case of a freelance journalist imprisoned for not turning over footage to the federal government. Gerrymander Exercise Working individually or in groups, students will develop legislative districts that will favor their assigned party. A Burning Issue: A Structured Academic Controversy Concerning Flag Desecration Is a Constitutional Amendment required to protect the U.S. flag from desecration? Students present a compromise resolution after they debate, deliberate, and analyze primary source documents, including the majority and dissenting opinions from Texas v. Johnson. What is an American? An Immigration Policy Seminar This lesson plan features four primary sources related to immigration legislation which provide the basis for a classroom activity in which students, working collaboratively, come up with their own immigration policy proposals. The topic of felon voting is further explored pro-con by categories. LegalWays: Search and Seizure This lesson examines more closely the issues surrounding search and seizure. The warrant requirement is explained and exceptions are described in a student reading with guiding questions. The students are asked to apply their knowledge and understanding to five hypothetical cases in the “What do you think?” activity. Defense lawyers would be very helpful in this lesson because the students are likely to have very specific questions that require knowledge of search law. Although this lesson reflects Minnesota law, it is generally applicable to all states and can be adapted. Which Founder Are You? Take an 11 question personality quiz to see which Founder you are most like! Seize the Vote This in an online interactive voting rights game which addresses historical and current suffrage issues. LegalWays: Juvenile Sentencing The disposition of a case (sentencing) is the focus of this lesson from the LegalWays Curriculum. It includes a description of the process and the options open to the court. In the “You Decide” activity, students serve as the judge and determine what the sentence will be in a hypothetical case. They are asked to provide the reasons for their decision. The final activity has students participating in a “Youth Forum” to consider the effectiveness of the juvenile justice system. Suggested guiding questions are included. This forum provides an excellent opportunity to invite local juvenile justice stakeholders including prosecution and defense lawyers, judges, corrections employees, treatment professionals, victims, families, law enforcement, etc. The questions provided are adaptations of questions considered by policy makers and the Minnesota Supreme Court. LegalWays: Juvenile Certification In this lesson from the LegalWays curriculum, certification(the process of moving a juvenile from juvenile court to adult court) is described, including presumptive and non-presumptive certification. The activity “You Decide” asks students to decide whether cases would be presumptive or non-presumptive and to identify the factors that would be considered in the certification process. The “Case Study” asks them to determine whether a juvenile should be certified and to explain the reasons for the decision. In the final “You Decide” activity the students analyze four cases and decide if the juvenile stays in juvenile court, becomes an EJJ, or is certified to adult court. The students are asked to provide their reasons. This activity requires that the other lessons in the unit be completed first. Although the lesson is based on Minnesota law and procedure, most states have similar processes. The lesson can be adapted to the law of other states. LegalWays: Extended Jurisdiction Juvenile This lesson from the LegalWays curriculum describes a process provided by Minnesota law that has the juvenile in both the juvenile system and adult system. It has been described as “a foot in each system.” How a juvenile becomes EJJ, what the court looks as in making its decision, and what happens if the juvenile does not complete the juvenile sentence are the topics of the lesson. The Questions guide the student through the information and the “You Decide” activities ask the students to apply what they have learned. LegalWays: Juvenile Delinquency Process In this lesson from the LegalWays curriculum the Steps in a Juvenile Delinquency case are described. This lesson enhances the lesson on the Juvenile Court in The Legal System unit. The student reading with guided questions and the “Ordering” activity help the students learn the procedure. The steps in the procedure can also be used in a “Human Continuum” activity. This lesson uses Minnesota law but can be adapted for other states. LegalWays: Introduction to Juvenile Delinquency This lesson asks the students to think about the history and purpose of the juvenile system and to decide how they feel about specific issues currently facing the juvenile justice system. Lesson begins with a “What do you think?” activity. The “Juvenile Justice Poll” can be used with groups outside of the class and the answers can be tabulated and the results shared. Teaching Strategy: Client Counseling Role Play Teacher instructions for Client Counseling Role-Plays, a strategy that provide students with the opportunity to develop a deeper understanding of the experiences of both clients and their counselors, to develop interviewing skills, to practice communication skills, and to learn content in a more meaningful and effective way. LegalWays: Termination of Parental Rights The reasons the court will use in terminating a parent’s rights are described and the steps are laid out in this lesson from the LegalWays curriculum. The “Case Study” presents a story of a baby and her mom and asks the students to decide if parental rights should be terminated and identify alternative steps that might be taken. Additional cases are considered in the “Mock Appellate Argument” activity. To conclude the lesson, the students are engaged in a “Mock Legislative Hearing” concerning a bill making it easier to terminate parental rights. LegalWays: Child Abuse and Neglect This lesson from LegalWays curriculum defines types of abuse, neglect, and endangerment and discusses mandated reporters and what happens when a report is made. Students use guiding questions and a matching activity to apply the law presented in a short student reading. The “You Decide” activity asks them to decide if a situation is neglect, endangerment, physical abuse, sexual abuse, or an accident. Many of the cases are actual stories. This lesson uses Minnesota law but can be easily adapted. LegalWays: Harassment and Restraining Orders Harassment is defined and steps a victim of harassment should take are included in this lesson from the LegalWays curriculum. In the “You Decide” activity the students decide if situations fit the definition of harassment. The “Ordering” activity asks students to order the steps in getting a restraining order. This activity can also be done as a Human Continuum (see Strategy section). The final activity, another “You Decide” asks students to decide if cases would result in a restraining order or an order for protection. This activity requires that the students have already completed the lesson on Domestic Abuse and Order for Protection. Student use a short reading on the law and guiding lessons to understand the content. Minnesota law is use in this lesson, but lesson adaptation is easily done. LegalWays: Domestic Abuse and Order for Protection This lesson from LegalWays describes domestic abuse and what can be done when a person is the victim of abuse. The procedure for getting an Order for Protection is included. The “Case Study” activity asks the students to apply their new knowledge to a hypothetical case. As a culminating activity, the students will apply their knowledge and learn more about the court system in the Mock Trial, which involves domestic abuse between a girlfriend and boyfriend. Lesson includes a student reading with guiding questions using Minnesota law. Lesson can be adapted. LegalWays: Child Protection In this lesson from LegalWays curriculum, Child Protection is explained, both the process and the people. The lesson also suggests what a parent involved in a child protection matter should do. Students use guiding questions to review the student reading. The two case studies ask the students to play the role of child protection worker and respond to the case, making recommendations and developing the case plan. They are also asked to take the perspective of a mother whose child is now under the services of child protection. This lesson applies Minnesota law but can be easily adapted. LegalWays: Runaways This lesson from the LegalWays curriculum helps the students understand what will happen to them if they run away. The “Matching” activity asks them to match the terms with the definitions. The “Role-Play” activity has the students giving advice to young people contemplating running away. Although this activity reflects the procedures used in MInnesota, they are similar to procedures in other states and the student reading and guiding questions are easily adaptable. LegalWays: Living Away From Home This lesson from the LegalWays curriculum focuses on emancipation, which is a difficult area to understand because there is no specific Minnesota statute that lists the requirements and the procedure to become emancipated. This lesson describes emancipation and how it occurs using a student reading with guiding questions. In some states, the law provides specific procedure for emancipation. LegalWays: Guardian Ad Litem & Child Intermediary This lesson from LegalWays curriculum tries to help students understand who the people in the juvenile justice system are and what they do. The lesson includes a student reading with guiding questions to explain the law. The “Your Turn” activity asks the students to create situations involving guardians ad litem and child intermediaries and to identify the responsibilities they have in each case. Although this uses Minnesota law, it can be adapted for other states. LegalWays: Children in Foster Homes Because of the importance of foster care in the lives of many young people, this lesson from the LegalWays curriculum looks at foster care from the perspective of a child in foster care, including a description of the specific rights that youth in foster care have. The Case Plan activity asks the students to analyze three cases looking at the reasons for the foster care, the attempts to correct the problems, the services that might help, and what needs to be done to return the child home. Lesson includes a student reading about the law including guiding questions. Although the lesson uses Minnesota law, it can be adapted. LegalWays: Visitation and Child Support By Jennifer Bloom and Sally Revak This lesson from the LegalWays curriculum describes the rights, the people involved, and the way visitation can be changed, Read More LegalWays: Paternity and Child Custody This lesson from the LegalWays curriculum focuses on paternity, which is an important issue in the lives of teen parents. The reading about the law with the guiding questions and the Yes or No You Decide activity are designed to help the students understand the content of the law. The “Each One Teach One” is an effective way to teach and review the substance of the law in an interactive way. Although the reading reflects Minnesota law, the reading can be adapted easily. LegalWays: Parenting In this lesson from the LegalWays curriculum, students are encouraged to think about the rights and responsibilities of parenting. The responsibility to keep children safe is emphasized. Lesson includes a short student reading with guiding questions. The “What do you think?” activity requires that the students understand the rights and responsibilities that they would have as teen parents toward their children and the rights and responsibilities that their parents have over them. “Your Turn” asks students to brainstorm conflicts between parents and children and then craft solutions that would be acceptable to both sides. “Your Turn” could also be used in mediation simulation. Although the lesson reflects Minnesota law, adaptions could be easily made. LegalWays: Juvenile Protection and Services This lesson presents the steps in juvenile protection and services cases. Materials include a student reading with related ordering activity. Lesson is targeted at young people at risk of being in the juvenile protection system. This activity uses Minnesota law but can be adapted for your state law. The roles of the people in the courtroom are described before students volunteer to play various parts. The scripted parts allow the trial to move quickly to jury deliberations during which the student jurors actually decide the verdict of the case. From King to Constitution “Get Off our Backs!” Authors: iCivics Students learn how the American colonists became used to governing themselves and ultimately declared independence from Britain in order to establish their own Read More Visitor from Outer Space Students are asked to evaluate and rank rights protected by the Bill of Rights in a hypothetical invasion by a visitor from outer space. Students complete the ranking individually and then work in small groups to come to consensus. Students apply prior knowledge about the meaning and importance of the rights and are inspired to learn more about these rights. Lesson can be used as an introductory or review activity. No Vehicles in the Park This lesson engages students in the interpretation of a law. Working in groups, they decide whether citizens engaged in various activities violate the law “No Vehicles in the Park.” Students can roleplay judges deciding whether the law has been violated or citizens requesting variances from a city council which would exempt them from the law. Claim Your Powers This cooperative small group activity will involve students in a class competition. Groups are assigned one of the three branches of government and points are awarded when groups correctly claim the branches power and/or checks the branch has over other branches. Students will claim powers based on their reading and application of the first three articles of the Constitution to hypothetical situations. The constitutional themes presented are separation of powers and checks and balances. Choosing a Judge Students explore the considerations that play a role in judicial selection and select the qualities they think should be considered in selecting a judge. Students will then act as governor as they select one judge from a list of candidates. People in the Court This lesson introduces students to the various people who appear in courtrooms including parties to the court action, court employees, and the public. In small groups, students analyze the interests and concerns of each person using a worksheet. Students are also introduced to the right to a fair trial guaranteed by the 6th Amendment to the U. S. Constitution and Article 1, Section 6 of the Minnesota Constitution. Government Mindwalk This lessons asks students to identify the various ways in which government is involved in their lives by imagining their daily activities and completing a worksheet with the activities, the rules or laws involved, the purpose or reasons, and whether the government action is appropriate. Immigration Law: Deport or Not? You Decide Author: Rebecca Swinney, University of Minnesota Law Student, Street Law Course 2010 This lesson introduces students to immigration law in the United States. The lesson Read More The Fourth Amendment and School Searches This lesson explores the Fourth Amendment protection against unreasonable searches and seizures through the lens of “School Searches.” Using role-play scenarios, individual and class opinion polls, and a PowerPoint overview of the relevant case law, students will explore their own views, and learn what the law says about reasonable expectations of “privacy” at school. Fourth Amendment’s Protections in the Home e2%80%99s-protections-in-the-home/ In this lesson, students will be presented with a brief summary of the scope of the Fourth Amendment as it relates to the home. They will read the facts of the Supreme Court case California v. Greenwood and work in small groups to deliberate as the Supreme Court would. After reaching a decision in their groups, they will be provided with the Supreme Court’s reasoning and have an opportunity to compare their explanations with those of the Court. The lesson includes background information and relevant case summaries for the teacher. Juvenile Sentencing This lesson plan will aid students in understanding the goals of the juvenile justice system and the Eighth Amendment’s prohibition on cruel and unusual punishment by participating in a Mock Appellate Argument. Juvenile Justice Introduction This lesson aims to introduce students to the history of juvenile law in the United States, the differences between Juvenile and Criminal Law, and the different ways in which courts treat juvenile delinquency cases. The second day focuses on the Minnesota Juvenile Justice system. The lessons uses case studies of actual cases and student written reflections. Understanding the Minnesota Judiciary: Impartiality and Elections Abstract: Students will learn about judicial elections and impartiality through case studies on the exercise of First Amendment rights in judicial elections, limitations on corporate contributions, and procedures to protect impartiality. Strategies used include jigsaw of case studies and deliberation on proposed change to the Minnesota Constitution regarding judicial elections. Understanding the Minnesota Judiciary: Judicial Decision Making Abstract: This lesson describes Minnesota’s different levels of courts differentiating them by structure, function, and decision making processes. The lesson includes a brief lecture/direct instruction component as well as a guided discussion activity. The direct instruction component is appropriate for any Civics course with a Judicial Branch unit focus. Due to its content, the lesson activity as written is most suitable for older high school students in Government or Civics classes. Cameras in the Courtroom-Lesson Example In this lesson, students will examine the constitutional conflicts of allowing or disallowing cameras in courtrooms. The importance of this issue will be emphasized through a discussion about media literacy. Students will participate in a “Shuttle Debate,” where they will argue whether the state of Minnesota, which currently does not allow cameras in courtrooms, should change its policy.
